The first break of the game occurred in the third quarter, when Armstrong fumbled a lateral and the ball was taked over the goal line by rerry o Richmond. Snodgrass convert for the extra point.

Armstrong made its six points in the fourth quarter as the so-sult of anomer fluke. Richmond punted from its own 20 yard line to about its 40 yard nne, where Scarsella, Richmond halfback downed the ball, nowever he arose from the bail, the re. eree neglected to blow his whishe and Polk of Armstrong sped off with the pigskin safely tucked under his arm. Several minutes passed before anyone, even the players, learned the true signiticance of the run. Armstrong gained its extra point as the result of an offside by Richmond. Richmond and Armstrong battled evenly during the first half, during which period the ball was never past eitner teams ten yard line. Frequent punting occurrred in the first and second quarters. The Richmond lineup during the first half consisted! largely of second string men, who showed a steady brand of foot-ball on their first real chance to see action.

In the second half, Coach Frank Ribbel of Richmond began sending in first string men in an attempt to score. However, Armstrong seemed to increase its pace in this period, and the Berkeley boys succeeded in making the largest gains in downs in the third and fourth quarters. The final period was filled with fumbles, intercepted passes, and meared plays. Both teams battled fiercely in a final attempt to Following Armstrong's touchdown, the Richmond backs attempted an aerial attack, but were unsuccessful.

Yesterday was an important day for the local second string gridders. They had their real chance to show their football knowledge in the first half, and made the best of their opportunity. Bravin made his first true debut at fullback and gained good yardage. Uga Boschetti, light and shifty halfback, earned himself a fairly certain berth for future contests. # PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—UP

Philadelphia Athletics have retained their world championship against the challenge of the St. Louis Cardinals, but baseball fans here pondered today over the fu-ture of Connie Mack's team.

Even while winning, the world champions showed weak spots that are quite likely to become more pronounced over another long season's grind.

With George Earnshaw and Lefty Grove in the prime of their careers, and Al Simmons, Jimmy Foxx and Mickey Cochrane show ing no signs of slowing up Connie Mack has the nucleus for anothe great team for 1931.

Replacements, however, must be found to round out the Athletics next season. Bing Miller, veteran right fielder, is nearing the end of his career and George (Mule Haas seems to have lost his bat ing punch, although still a ball nawk in the outfield.

Max Bishop and Joe Boley played steady baseball around the keystone sack in the world series, but both are slowing up. Boley probably wi'l be the first to crack. His reak hitting makes it almost imerative that the A's get a new ortstop for next season.

Bishop still is one of the best lead-off men in baseball because of his keen batting eye, and his ability to get walks. Bishop batted Miss Francis is the daughter of Katherine Clinton, well-known repertoire actress. After sending her convent-trained child to a secretarial school in New York with the hope that Kay would enter the business profession rather than the stage, she discovered that the inherited genius for dramatics was too strong for her objections. Accordingly Kay was permitted to play a role in a modern dress version of Hamlet. Then came stock company work, followed by Kay's first movie part in "Gentlemen of the Press" with Walter Huston. Others in which she has appeared are "Dangerous Curves" "The Cocconuts" and "Street of Chance", the latter with William Power. Miss Francis is cassidered by Hollywood writers to be the most stunning dresser in the film capital.

In "Street of Chance" she was seen as the neglected wife of the cosmopolite gambler. In "For the Defense" she is not nearly so neglected. In fact, Powell loves her with such sincerity in this production that he "takes the rap" in a criminal case, in order to save her from a life-term fin jail.

Miss France was the case of the cosmology of the c Miss Francis was born in Okla-homa City about twenty years ago. She is five feet, five inches tall. Also 'Laurel & Hardy Murder

"The Richest Man in the World" with a cast which includes the veteran stage actor, Louis Mann, Elliott Nugent, Robert Montgomery, Leila Hyams, Francis X. Bushman Jr., Mary Doran, Henry Armetta, Jeane Wood, Lee Kohlmar and Robert McWade will open tomor-row at the Fox-California theater. Nugent again displays his vercarriery in not only playing a featured role but in having written the story in collaboration with his father, J. C. Nungent. Samuel Ornitz, author of "The Yankee Passional," did the adaptation and Sam Wood directed. The story is a saga of family life

tracing the career of an old German barber and his wife who come to America to make their fortune and become sadly disillusioned in the process. The children grow up and seek their cwn careers. One becomes an embezzler and narrowly escapes prison; another graduates from medical school and becomes too good for his family; one daughter marries and the young est gets into difficulties with a serious love affair. The whole chronicle is a simple story of every-day life whose prototypes movie au-diences will recognize in their own friends and in the inmates of their Childhood sequences in both the first and third generations play an important share in the story and a large number of children were interviewed in an attempt to get the proper types. The principal roles finally went to Phillippe de Lacey, Gordon Thorpe, Betsey Ann Hisle Evelyn Mills and Edwin Mills, while a number of other children were used as extras.

county jail which Chicago wanted to seil and couldn't, is being put into use after all, as a home for Chicago's homeless.

The old structure, superceded last year by a new jail, will be ready in a few days to house 3000 of the destitute who now sleep on the lower level of Micnigan boulevard, superrated by a lane asphalt and concrete from the richest avenue in the midwest. On the upper level, purr long lines of automobiles. Exclusive shop windows glitter. Strollers more often than not wear evening dress. When the upper level citizens learned of the strategic situation directly beneath them they immediately started to trundle loads of food to the half starving and shivering men below. But that wasn't enough. Winter was on the way. So the citizens under leadership of Mrs. Bernice C. Post, requisitioned the old jail, got President Hoover to order army cots without bothering about governmental red tape, and immediately started refurnishing the ancient structure. It will be ready within a week.

William Wrigley, Jr., whose white "chewing gum tower" is one of the most imposing buildings on the double decked boulevard, meanwhile, was at work preparing a building he owns on the west side of the city for a similar hotel for the destitute.

By Haenigsen The Correlated Costume

> HERE is a definite schism between clothes of the afternoon and clothes for general wear, and entirely different must be the accessories. Costume correlation is requisite. With the acceptance of elegance as the final aim in dress, the casual note has disappeared, accessories being assembled in tune with the formality of the costume.

> An afternoon frock of dark brown canton crepe, the skirt fan pleated and seams fagotted, looks well with a hat of chiffon felt, also brown, and cut in semi-poke shape, with the brow line rising sharply over one eye.

Footwear of brown kid in sandal style, with insets of dark brown suede, harmonizes in color value, takes hosiery of dull sheen. Gloves of brown suede in six-button mousquetaire and bag of fine suede in brown carry out the leather note, the ornament on the latter being of marcasite and jade to add a bit of contrasting color. For a nexklace, solid gold with carved jade.

Marie Alphonsine has done a brimmed hat that tells the sweetest story of the season for this kind of hat. It is brown felt (or it may be, of course, in other colors) and it has inset pieces of faille ribbon in a lighter shade—almost a pale tan.

FRITZI RITZ

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.-UP-Suspension of the stock exchange house of Prince & Whitely, one of the largest in the financial com munity, sent the stock market crashing to new lows today.

Losses aggregated $2,000,000,000 in market valuation. More than 700 issues were selling below 1929 lows made on November 13.

U. S. Steel crashed below its 1929 low of 150 and touched 146 near the close where it was off 5 1-8 points or more than $42,000,000 in market valuation. It closed at
